Recused from years of pain from an abusive owner, Yogi deserves a chance for a good life. Tied in a kitchen on a 2 foot rope for 12 hours a day, Yogi could not move away from his urine puddles and spent most of his time saturated in it. He would be dragged down the stairs and yelled at to “go”. He constantly shook and had diarrhea.

In the three short weeks since his rescue, Yogi no longer shakes, nor has diarrhea but his medical issues need to be addressed. He moans and cries out in pain. He has to wear a diaper because of kidney issues.

The veterinarian needs to evaluate Yogi with x-rays, ultrasound, blood testing, a cardiac consultation with EKG and dental care. The estimated cost is $1200. The vet says his issues are treatable. The rescuer has paid $500 so far and needs help to continue.
